NON-TRADITIONAL METHODS OF DELIVERING INSTRUCTION

New River Community and Technical College encourages the use of technology. Any course offered at New River may contain an online component. Students are urged to consider this as they schedule their courses. Computer labs exist at all New River campus locations for student use.

ITV: Instructional Television is a distance-learning format utilizing broadcast television (meaning that course broadcasts may be viewed live as they are broadcast or taped [at home or at the college] and viewed at a later time). Some class meetings are held at the campus where the class is scheduled. The course instructor and students discuss important ideas and concepts, review the recordings or readings, and give or take exams. Students taking these classes are expected to view the video broadcasts and attend scheduled class meetings. This distance learning format provides fewer class meetings than traditional courses but requires students to exhibit self-discipline to complete assignments between class meetings.

ITVWE: Instructional Television Web Enhanced combines the ITV system with a portion of the course using ANGEL. With fewer class meetings than a traditional class, this delivery format requires students to view the video broadcasts and to access the online ANGEL information.

IVN: Interactive Video Network is a two-way audio/video system used for teaching and learning in which students are seated in designated electronic classrooms at Beaver, Beckley, Princeton, Lewisburg, or Summersville. These courses involve scheduled class meetings at the designated classrooms. Each course meets at all scheduled sites simultaneously and attendance is required. This instructional delivery format enables students located at one site to receive instruction from (and interact with) an instructor located at one of the other sites (in real time).

IVNWE: Interactive Video Network Web Enhanced combines the IVN system with a portion of the course using ANGEL. This delivery format requires students to attend scheduled class meetings for the IVN portion of the course and to access ANGEL for a portion of the course.

ANGEL: ANGEL is an online Course Management System (CMS) used to deliver instructional materials via the Internet and is administered by New River. ANGEL has a number of features including: (1) robust communication tools such as course-based email, (2) discussion lists, (3) online assessments and grade books, and (4) online course content with assignments and a drop-box for submitting course work to the instructor. This instructional delivery format requires a significant level of student self-discipline since some courses require no in-class meetings at all. Because these courses involve so much computer-based interaction, students should have average (or better) computer skills and a computer with a fast connection to the Internet is highly recommended (each of our branch campuses have computer labs).

WEANG: Web Enhanced ANGEL courses are a combination of traditional teaching methods involving regular class meetings with a portion of the course being delivered online using ANGEL. As a result of having a substantial portion of the course online, there may be fewer class meetings than a traditional course.

WEBDL: Web-based Distance Learning refers to courses that New River has brokered through external agencies. Current examples of these brokered relationships include AIB, KYDL, EXCITE, and SAIL. These courses are not taught by New River faculty and do not utilize the New River course management system (ANGEL). Instead, students must initiate contact with the designated point of contact from the brokering agency (AIB, EXCITE, or SAIL).

ONLINE COURSES

Online courses require as much (or sometimes even more) effort on your part as traditional in-class courses. Taking a course online means you don't have to travel to campus for class meetings but you do need to exhibit a high degree of self-discipline to complete the course requirements on time. You must also communicate effectively with your instructor to adequately understand all the course requirements so you can be successful in the online learning environment.

The administrative procedures and deadlines for online courses are the same as for traditional in-class courses. This applies to enrolling, paying tuition, adding/dropping, and withdrawing from online courses. A modest technology fee for online courses is added to the cost of tuition. For any questions pertaining to these issues please contact your campus Student Services representative.

To succeed in your online course(s) you must:

1. Login to your online course using this link: <http://angel.newriver.edu>. Your username is always lowercase and is typically your last name followed by your first and middle initial (smith_ja). Your password is initially your 9-digit New River ID number and you should change it when you login. If you need assistance, please contact the Help Desk (304.929.6725 or itsupport@newriver.edu).
2. Your New River username/password gains you access to your New River email and to ANGEL. The primary method of electronic communications at New River is your college email address. You should use your account frequently to avoid missing important information. To check your email use this link: <http://email.newriver.edu>

For any questions pertaining to technical support call 304.929.6725 or email at itsupport@newriver.edu.
